ECKINGTON, Killamarsh and Renishaw received another good news boost this week with news of yet another job-creating cash scheme.

Firms moving into the 'Assisted Area' have been promised substantial cash grants towards their set-up costs which, it is hoped, will boost chances of creating more jobs.

Said leading Derbyshire councillor Geoff Carlile: "Assisted Area status is a key incentive to encourage new business to Derbyshire. It can help both to provide new jobs and safeguard existing ones."

"We understand that, under new guidelines, which reduced the proportion of the European's Union's population covered by regional aid, the area of Derbyshire eligible for help under the programme would shrink."

"The county council has lobbied hard for our needy communities and, generally speaking, I think we can be satisfied with the outcome."

On line in Eckington...

COMPUTER fans in Eckington are in cyber heaven following the opening of a new shop on West Street.

The Easy Pc Shop — the first in a line of shops owned by the town's millionaire businessman Joseph de Saram — is open for business with a full stock of PCs and components.

Also available is an Internet Zone to allow beginners and professionals access to the Internet.

A website is being set up, dubbed Eckington.com, where local individuals and firms can let the world know about what's going on in Eckington.

Computer courses are promised too as are interactive game evenings and the chance to e-mail, scan in pictures and even record your own CD!

Joseph de Saram, the man behind the initiative, is the founder and chairman of award winning information technology firm Rhodium Plc and is still in his late 20s.

He is keen to put something back into the community which supported him in his formative years and sees the new shop as one way of achieving this.

Spokesman Margaret Cunniffe underlined that pledge to ensure the new venture will support the efforts to revive the town.

"We hope that the community will get involved and support the project and its endeavours, keeping business and jobs in the area."
